California's Growing Renewable Energy Market

Not an advertisement. We just thought you would find this interesting.

Solar Wind Energy Tower Actively Pursuing California's Growing Renewable Energy Market Opportunity. We found this article interesting from the stand point that California has set standard to be met.

Solar Wind Downdraft Tower structures capable of producing abundant, inexpensive electricity to meet the world's increasing demand, announced that given California's recent legislation requiring energy companies to buy 50% of their power from renewable sources by 2030, the Company and its a wholly owned subsidiary,

Arizona Green Power LLC (AGP), are diligently pursuing the California energy market through the compliance process that will enable us to aggressively pursue Power Purchase Agreements (PPA's) for long term supply of power to accredited purchasers, which will support the financing of the project in San Luis, Arizona. High Solar Activity & Potentially Fracking Caused Earthquakes

Sun Spot AR2422 is crackling with activity and we have been receiving many alert messages over the last week. Most activity is in the C and M class range however NOAA forecasters estimate a 25% chance of powerful X-class solar flares could occur soon.

Aside from the stupidity of Big Business and its drive for profits regardless of the damage it does to the planet, potentially with fracking and such practices, there is another influence that appears to have a lot to do with earthquakes.

The Sun.

Mainstream science is slow to concur with this idea, but there appears to be some evidence that earthquakes on Earth are somehow associated with activity on the sun, appearing to occur within a 14-day window either side of a CME or solar storm or something to do with coronal holes, similar to the one show above.

Fracking Earthquakes “Appear” To Be A Thing, Says Oil And Gas Lobbying Organization

The internet has been buzzing with news that several oil and gas producing US states are finally responding to the issue of fracking earthquakes — but don't hold your breath for any significant regulatory shift. These particular states are organized under the banner of the appropriately named States First Initiative, which launched in 2013 to lobby against tighter federal regulation of oil and gas operations.

StatesFirst Report Covers Effects from Disposal Wells, NOT Hydraulic Fracturing

StatesFirst, a joint initiative led by the Interstate Oil and Gas Compact Commission (IOGCC) and the Ground Water Protection Council (GWPC), has released guidance and findings related to reports of induced seismicity in oil and gas drilling regions.

A total of 13 states partnered in the project, including Oklahoma, where the current average rate of earthquakes is approximately 600 times historical averages. Michael Teague, Secretary of Energy and Environment for the state of Oklahoma, said several states were trying different methods in an attempt to identify the reason for the quakes.

“At this point, the seismologists, have come to the conclusion that these earthquakes really are related to disposal wells,” said Teague in an exclusive interview with Oil & Gas 360®. “Nobody is really sure of the exact aspect, whether it be volume, rates, location, or depth. It’s probably a combination of several of those things.”

The Big 8.3 in Chile +

Indonesia, Canada and Nevada: Earthquakes 24-30 September 2015

September 16th's M8.3 Chilean earthquake reverberations continued this week.

The reverberations of September 16th's M8.3 Chilean earthquake continued this week, although they're dying away. Of the seismic events recorded on the United States Geological Survey's real time earthquake map, which includes tremors of all magnitudes in the US and its territories and those of at least magnitude 4 ($\geq M4.0$) elsewhere, 60 of the 166 $\geq M4.0$ were aftershocks to the main event.

The largest of these clocked a mere M6.2, more than two magnitudes smaller than the mainshock and, given that the magnitude scale is logarithmic, less than 100th of its actual size. Nevertheless, it ranked as the second largest earthquake of the week, one of three $\geq M6.0$ to appear on the map....More

DRUG BOUGHT BY STARTUP JUMPS TO $750: A drug commonly used to treat life-threatening parasitic infections has jumped in price from $13.50 to $750 per tablet after being acquired by a pharmaceutical startup run by a former hedge fund manager. The 62-year-old drug, Daraprim, was acquired by Turing Pharmaceuticals earlier this year. It's price jump is one of a series of increases for everything from Hepatitis drugs to generics after acquisition by companies that rebrand them by "specialty drugs," The New York Times reports. Physicians worry that the increase may lead doctors to prescribe less costly but less effective remedies.

Be happy for others...

I realized something the other day. I realized that a shift happened in my life when I changed the emotions that I let live inside of me. When I allowed myself to harbor jealousy, anger, and frustration I wasn't able to produce any results. When I switched to peace, happiness, and motivation, everything began to flow.

There are people on your same level or in your same occupation. They are getting some opportunities that you aren't getting. Things seem to be going their way based on their Facebook posts and conversation. How do you feel about it? Are you jealous? Does it make you angry? Do you get down on yourself? Be honest with yourself because you're all you have. Check those emotions.

I once would get upset when I saw things like that. I would ask God "why not me?" I would be frustrated and down on myself. Now I say, "God bless em. I happy for em. I'm glad they are in their season. I know my season is coming and I just hope they will be ok when they are watching me shine in my purpose. Hating hurts and I thank God I'm not a hater." I switched from being a hater to feeling sorry for haters. I realize that switch unlocked my potential.

Practice being happy for others. Go through the motions until it becomes natural. Process it. Remind yourself that your time is coming. And that everything for you is for you. And no one can have your blessings. Don't be jealous, be inspired and motivated!

Best,
